Streaming readies students

The Life and Society 1st and 2nd Year Program (formerly Community and Law Enforcement) is set for the streaming for future years but as a wide variety of other opportunities for those who choose to enter the program.

Students who enter the Law and Society 1st Year Admissions Program (streaming) in the future will be able to choose their stream from the second year stream. Robert F. Rogers, president of the program says only one third of the graduate students in this first stream police officers.

The streaming two main stream classes in other fields such as business work, health, social sciences, provide an excellent and necessary and intensive education.

To prepare the second year students for their future careers, each Thursday is devoted to a program called "social action" training.

The "streaming" provides the students with a wide range of experiences for example, students taking in the police officers training is in the Police Officer College, and the Life and Society students in the Police Officer College in Toronto to receive training.

The Life and Society Admissions Program students will also be taking part in a two week work release in February where students will gain on the job experience at law enforcement.

OHP assistance

Students who have been in OHP (Ontario Health Program) and receive financial assistance (help) to cover the cost of the health plan and in the case of the emergency assistance (help) to cover the cost of the health plan and in the case of the emergency assistance (help) to cover the cost of the health plan.

Students who filed the OHP program application last year, and are planning to continue their education must also re-apply.

A lot of students think that the OHP is a program that is only for students who are in financial need, but it is not. It is a program that is available to all students who are in financial need, but it is not.

Under the current regulations, a single student who makes less than $10,000 in the previous year is eligible for full program assistance.

Applications forms can be picked up at the school office.

Broadcasters recognized

By Sandy Catherine

A total of 11 students were awarded the title of Student and Graduate of the Broadcast Media and Television program at their graduation ceremony last Wednesday morning at the Conestoga College.

Bob Rogers, President of Student Conestoga College of Toronto, was the guest speaker.

He also gave the Toronto media station (CFTM) the title of the year.

Rogers, one of the most talented and well known in the broadcast industry, addressed the students with some excellent advice. He said the use of a microphone is almost essential in the use of broadcast media and that the students should be prepared to accept the challenges of the broadcast industry.

Display of alarming behavior

The importance of a few statistics to the building during last week's fire alarm can only be explained by its status: the building's fire alarm and the role of the building's fire alarm.

If the alarm had been sounding more than a dozen times in the fire alarm system, which was not, the building's fire alarm would have been sounding more than a dozen times in the fire alarm system.

Student boarders beware

by John Clement

Students thinking of moving out on their own should take this consideration that some apartments are becoming available for short-term stays. The information of viewing a house in a boarding house should be approached with caution.

The Waterloo office of the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) has received reports showing a drop in the vacancy rate for the last three months.

In a CMHC survey of the region in December last year, more than 10,000 vacancies were reported. This is a drop from last year's when the vacant apartments were listed in a survey of 11,000 units.

Those figures compared with the fact that many landlords want to limit the number of students boarding houses in order to make sure that the houses are not used as a place of political protest, that can cause a delay in the rental process.

Students at boarding houses will be disappointed that they cannot be accommodated in the Waterloo region. But should a problem arise, such as a student leaving the house to go to school, the landlord will be able to find a replacement. The only real problem is the delay in the rental process. The delay in the rental process is due to the fact that many landlords are not willing to rent to students. This is due to the fact that many landlords are not willing to rent to students. This is due to the fact that many landlords are not willing to rent to students.

While the situation is not ideal, it is not hopeless. Students who are looking for a place to live should be able to find a place to live.
